"The lesson for me to learn was that the measure of any success in the ministry would not be how well the people respond, but how well I obey God and how faithful was my commitment. "It was easy to say that I love God, however, the real test was to come in serving Him in spite of my own pain" "What I have come to learn is, it is not how great the size of the church building, nor is it how many people occupy the pews, but it is how great the faith of the church."
